Chamber of Commerce to continue effort for return of motel tax funds

A renewed effort to seek the return for use in Carmel Valley of more of the $15,000 now estimated as the annual county take in local motel and resort room taxes was urged at the CV Chamber of Commerce meeting last Wednesday at Los Laureles Lodge.

A committee, headed by Skip Marquard, will continue to work on the project.

Proposed budget of $3,131.91 for the coming year was read by Treas. Tom Verga; the budget has to be submitted to the county to qualify for its $750 advertising allocation to the local chamber.

The suggestion by Lou Gardner was approved to include the budget of the Village Committee, which is a part of the chamber, in the over-all Chamber budget to indicate additional local efforts. The Village Committee assesses its 20-some members $180 each per year for promotional projects.

It was decided to repeat election of officers for the coming year, because of a question raised by Sec. Lori Swiess whether a quorum according to the by-laws was present at the election at a directors' meeting earlier this month.

Indications are that the same officers as already chosen will again be elected: Pres. Ken Van Hagen, 1st Vice Pres. Don McKenzie, 2nd Vice Pres. Richard Brinton and Treas. Tom Hefling.

A new secretary, Mrs. Jack Black, will take over the first of the year, it was announced, succeeding Mrs. Swiess. Discussion pointed out that the new by-laws provide for appointment by the president of the secretary, a post which pays $50 a month, with approval of the board.

Need for raising more funds was emphasized, with comment that the organization missed a chance to participate in the September Fiesta de los Amigos.

A drive to boost the membership by 15 new members, making a total of 100, will be necessary to meet the new budget. An excellent potential lies in the new CV Shopping Center in mid-Valley and at the Rancho Shopping Center at the mouth of the Valley, it was pointed out.

A letter of commendation will be sent to the Carmel Valley Parking Association for its new paving and landscaping, a project launched by the late Art Bennett and Clark Swan.

The next regular meeting will be Wednesday, Jan. 11. The officers for the coming year will be installed at the annual dinner to be held on Saturday, Jan. 8. Locations will be announced later.

CUSD votes pay for in-lieu transportation

Two parents who have been making two round trips per day to deliver their children to the nearest bus stop will be totally reimbursed instead of on a one way basis, by vote of the CUSD Board.

Lowell Mosier of San Clemente and Tom Crippin from the San Caros Ranch appeared before the Carmel School Board last week to request the change. Because of the ages of the children and the difference in hours, each family must make the trips with no possibility for a car pool. These trips were made solely for the purpose of taking the children, since both families are employed at their places of residence. The financial problem is a real one according to the two men.

They told the board that if it was unable to approve the reimbursement then they would have to take legal steps to insist that a bus pick up the children. This was an obvious reference to the Manjares case, where the CUSD lost a legal battle last year and were required to provide transportation to the Manjares family who live 20 miles east of Carmel Valley Village.

Board member Clayton Neill stated that these people (Mosier and Crippin) were making a real effort to get their children to the bus stop, which was not true in the other case.

Non-fighters get help at school, says Joan Baez

"If young men are coming to the school from Fort Ord, then it seems to me there is something wrong with Fort Ord, not that the school is wrong," So commented Joan Baez as she spoke of the men in military service that have been attending classes at her school, the Institute for the Study of Non-Violence.

Recently in a press conference in Los Angeles where she went to give a benefit concert to help the Delano workers, Joan was asked about the percentage of military attendees. This was reported as 50% of the school enrollment. She went on to explain that at the time, the exisiting class was ten students and of the ten in that particular session, five were soldiers from Fort Ord. In the present session there are 25 students of which two are from the service.

Most of the young men who have written or contacted her, Joan said, have applied for conscientious objector status. These are men who are against war and killing, she added, but they also face the moral question of getting out of the Army as well as facing their own beliefs.

NOT AN AWOL HAVEN

Joan told The Outlook that the school is not giving instruction in conscientious objecting, but it gives them a chance to ask questions...the Army is driving them crazy and they can't find answers there ... They need an opportunity to explore their own minds.

The whole point of their attendance at the sessions, according to Joan, is not to "run away from the Army" but get moral hints on what they can do. If they wish legal advice then they go to a lawyer, but to discover their own minds, they sit in on sessions and talk, learn and discuss the problems of war with others who hate violence. She went on to say that they do not "teach," but give the students an opportunity to learn.

The whole thing of the military attendance was triggered

CARMEL VALLEY OUTLOOK December 21, 1966

Editorial

Incorporation

The word "incorporation" popped up casually at last week's Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce meeting, and was as casually batted down with the comment, "But who would vote for it?"

It was mentioned in connection with the fact that Carmel Valley resorts are producing about $15,000 a year in room tax revenue. This goes into the county general fund, unlike room tax revenue paid in cities, which keep all the tax.

Incorporation of rural Carmel Valley is presumed to be in the distant future because it would mean another tax, a discouraging thought in most people's minds. While there have been battles on zoning, there has not been a big enough crisis to stir up sufficient concern for serious consideration of incorporation.

The battle that boiled up last year over the Del Mesa Carmel zoning is the sort that swings thoughts towards the self-determination offered by incorporation. We heard the possibility of local government briefly discussed again during argument on the recent zoning application for the high-density condominium proposal beside Rancho del Monte Country Club. If the board of supervisors should disregard the desires of the majority of Valleyites too often, self-government through incorporation would be the alternative.

CASUAL COUNTY

The very casualness of the county in handling matters of grave concern to local areas is worrisome to many. The chief concern of each supervisor is for his individual district—King City, Salinas, etc. True, too, that actions of individual supervisors—Supervisor Tom Hudson being no exception—do not meet with enthusiasm from many of their constituents.

The bitter 3-2 split by the board of supervisors over the Moss Landing refinery proposal has resulted in a lapse of friendly cooperation. This split seems to be moderating, and it hasn't yet caused incidents in which Carmel Valley has been the victim.

But the worry is still there—that the three supervisors over the mountain would, just for spite, vote against something of special importance to Carmel Valley and Carmel.

Another local problem, which generated thoughts of incorporation during its discussion, is police protection. As lawlessness increases and the population grows, concern mounts in the Valley.

Sheriff Jack Davenport explains that the Valley can have the services of only one deputy because the supervisors won't appropriate more money. In the meantime, burglaries, in particular, increase. And there is no deputy on duty here at all from midnight to 8 a.m. Local government would be more responsive, if the people would be willing to pay for added police service.

Thoughts of incorporation produce speculation on "who would control" the local government and what it might do under various circumstances. "I'm worried that one extreme or the other might dominate," was one comment.

3 INCORPORATIONS

From our experience, city councils more accurately reflect local desires. We have been in the middle of three incorporations, triggered by different circumstances than exist in Carmel Valley, and we have observed the resulting local governments in action. They are Los Altos, Los Altos Hills and Cupertino, which were frightened into incorporation by threats of engulfment from neighboring cities with lower standards.

Right now, Los Altos and Cupertino are trying to annex small adjacent areas in which the county, with its casual disregard for desires of neighboring residents in cities, is in the process of giving away zoning for gas stations.

Los Altos started about 13 years ago with a minimum tax of 25¢. The tax has crawled up to 83¢ today as the town added services—absorbed the fire district, improved street lighting, put in sewers, and passed street-improvement bonds.

Los Altos Hills, which incorporated for protection against encroachment by Los Altos, has maintained the same 25¢ tax it began with. Its budget was helped by a gift of land for its town hall, and it contracts with the county for additional protection from the sheriff's department.

SARATOGA RATE 10¢

Cupertino and Saratoga are two other cities which contract with the sheriff's department for their police protection. Launched 10 years ago with a 25¢ tax rate, Cupertino held this tax line until recent approval of a $1,300,000 bond issue for five parks and a city hall, which put the rate to 55¢. Saratoga has maintained its minimal tax rate of a mere 10¢ since incorporation about five years ago.

Some three years ago the CV Chamber of Commerce sponsored a study on incorporation by the Coru Foundation. The facts are there if anyone wants them. If not now, there may come a time.

SCHOOL NEWS

By ANNA KOHNER
Principal, Woods School

Christmas, of course, has been the main theme at Woods School these days. Last week each class was busy decorating and planning for parties, gathering canned goods for the Monterey Peninsula Christmas Bureau and practicing carols for the annual Christmas Sing, held on Wednesday in the school cafeteria.

Of special interest at Woods this year is the formation of the Woods School Parent Club, with Dr. and Mrs. Daniel LaMothe as co-presidents. Great plans are in the air and I predict many exciting activities as this group works for and with the school. Working closely with the Parent Club is the Parent Advisory Council, with Mrs. William Breneman as chairman. This group meets monthly to become informed about activities of the school, about the educational program and to advise the school staff about any problems that may arise.

One of the on-going activities of the school is that of sharing our talents and our knowledge with others. Any one day may find a seven year old reading a favorite story to an upper primary class or a group of older students presenting a short play to the beginners. The kindergarten is constantly host to numerous "helpers," who come to mix paint, thread needles, place the heavy equipment outdoors or read to the children. For some the kindergarten is also a refuge and a needed time for physical activity, away from the pressures of academic life for a few minutes.

A small lad appeared in the school office the other day, bringing his books and pencils with him. The principal asked why he had been sent there, to which the lad replied, "It was too noisy in my room and I couldn't do my work." "I understand," said the principal. "Who was making the noise so that you couldn't work?" "Well, I was" answered the lad!

A happy holiday season to all from the students and staff of Woods School.

In Short

SOME HIDDEN artistic talents of some of the faculty of Carmel High School were unveiled at a faculty art show Friday afternoon. Three of athletic director Bob Walthour's paintings, still life and landscapes, were on display. Principal Warren Edwards qualified with a mosaic of Christmas cards. Lloyd Baskerville's plants, a potted rosemary bush and a bonsai evergreen, were admitted. A sensation was the whimsical creation by Howard Byrne of a face, using a bamboo rake and nozzle of a garden hose.

Producing most laughs was a "golf sketch" signed by "Rembrandt (Buzz) Rainer," English teacher, football and golf coach, who has just been selected to play in the Crosby Tournament. There were candles and candle sticks by Harold Lippstreu, a stool with an embroidered seat by Dorothy Wright, jewelry by Ethelyne Ward, enamel ware, ceramics by Barbara Rainer, a tapestry by Nellie Ryder, a cat collage by Mary Clayton, portrait by Diana Hardy, paintings and sketches by Susan Dean, Jean Fosnot and Bill Stone, in whose art classroom the exhibit was staged.

IF YOU FIND IT next to impossible to get a phone call into Carmel High School, blame the tight budget. Phone lines have been cut down to two, which produces a jam-up at the switchboard and the necessity usually to dial and dial try after try to get it. It's the same struggle for staffers to phone out.

SEA OTTERS are doing nicely, thank you. Don't know who swims around out there counting them, but the State Dept. of Fish and Game contends they've multiplied 100 in the past year. Now 600 sea otters between Monterey Bay and Cayucos, up from 500. Elephant seals are up from 3,090 to 3,563, no more, no less, which makes you wonder.

The other night we heard a delightful tale of the early 1940's in Chicago. It was just before the wartime shutdown on automobile manufacturing and a present Carmel Valley resident, then in high school, lived with his mother... a present Carmel resident. He was about to graduate in June, and Mother told son, "I will buy you a car for graduation, but we'll get it now."

The 1941 Chevy coupe was duly chosen and paid for, and after papers were cleared several days later, it was ready to be picked up.

They arrived at the auto salesroom and the manager proudly handed the keys to the boy... who,... startled... said, "but I don't drive!"

A little nonplussed, but still in control, the man turned and handed the keys to the mother... who shook her head and said, "but I don't drive."

A salesman arranged to deliver them home in the new prize and it was parked in front of the house where it sat for a number of days while they polished it and smiled at it, and were a little scared of it.

Letter to the Editor

Thanks from Meharrys

EDITOR: This is the only way my husband and I can think of to thank all of you for the help you gave us when the river waters were damaging our property. Some of the faces we recognized and the early arrivals like Dick Crane and his friend, George Mead, and Jackie Elliott and her friends, we had time to say hello to and to thank, but those that arrived later and pitched in to help—all we can say is THANK YOU in big capital letters.

The fire department was down to help too and whether they passed the word or not we don't know, but it was a wonderful feeling to know we have such people as neighbors and friends here in the Valley.

Again, may we say thank you from the bottom of our hearts to all of you who helped.

Pat and Don Meharry

Studio Theatre opens rowdy 'Funny Thing'

There's a lot of innocent merriment (masquerading as bawdy farce) going on at the Studio Restaurant Theatre this holiday season with a fine rowdy presentation of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

The fun is mostly visual, however, with the actors mugging and capering in fine style. One could wish for a Cole Porter to charm-up the lyrics and put some surprises in the tunes.

A program note says the authors got their idea from a play by Plautus "which quite probably also inspired 'The Comedy of Errors.'" Methinks it served them not so well as it did the Bard of Avon. But anyway, the local company, under the direction of Michael Keller, does fine by its efforts.

Making good fun of the whole thing is Dick Bird as a bumbling Roman bumpkin trying to buy his freedom in return for producing a fair young virgin (from the local bawdy house) for the fair young hero (whose name is Hero).

Buck Buchanan does a stylish turn as an aging patrician with an eye for the girls. Robert Dreggors as Hero, uses a smile of such cherubic idiocy that it is positively beguiling, and Ed Shinbrot is horrific in a long greasy wig with circles around his eyes to match his purple toga.

Don Chambers has a fine voice and, every inch a conquering general, carries each scene he is in.

Milton Hayes is a very funny-looking fellow in his farcial make-up and vast exposure of arms and legs. Good sport Mona Fletcher in her role of a nasty wife does her best with a nasty song.

Elaine Yates as the sweet young heroine reminds us of T.V.'s Barbara Eden and she sings well too. Just as pretty are dancing girls Leslee Stanton, Linda Glenn, Lynn Burgers, Gwen Bennett and Dianna Lockwood.

Jim Scott is all done up as an ancient mariner and other young men who double as a sort of chorus of soldiers, slaves, eunuchs or whatever are Larry Young, Allan Yates and Peter Wasowski.

Others to be commended are Ronald S. Guillemette, stage manager; Elizabeth Klein, choreographer; Judy Evans, costumes; Bob Evans, Jr., setting and lighting, and perhaps most of all, Tom Fordham's musical direction and fine piano playing which was taped and rerun during performance.

Sauciness missing from French farce

By DONALD MINOR

Dickens and Disney are all very well as Christmas dislodgeables, but it would seem, on the face of it, that an ideal restorative for the shopping-ridden holiday spirit would be a French bedroom farce. "Hotel Paradiso" is just such a farce. It was written about five or sex decades ago, by the playwright laureate to the tired Parisian business man, Georges Feydeau. About nine years ago this naughty nonsense was trundled out of the garage to serve as a Broadway vehicle for the raffish comic genius of Bert Lahr.

Evidently encouraged by the success which Mr. Lahr's leering performance provided the stage revival, Peter Glenville has made an expensive attempt to transfer Monsiuer Feydeau's turn-of-the-century Hellzapoppin to the family screen. To be sure, the farcical paraphernalia is all there; rendezvous in a seedy hotel, charades and mistaken identities, whirlwind comings and goings through bedroom and corridor, an accomodating concierge and a cretinous bellboy, confrontations and escapes, worldly ladies mixed with bloomered schoolgirls and, Mon Dieu, a raid by the gendarmerie. Oh yes, and the indispensable saucy maid. Everything is there, mounted in a handsome production studded with famous players and photographed with a fine feeling for la Belle epoque by Henri Decae—everything, that is, but the kind of uninhibited bawdiness which boomed Mr. Lahr across the footlights and which might have given this movie melange a raison d'etre.

Instead of the outrageous raucousness of the rubber-faced Mr. Lahr, we are given the skinny archness of Mr. Alec Guinness. With the skillful assistance rendered by a lineup of skillful comic players, including such proven guffaw extraction experts as Akim Tamiroff and Robert Morley, Mr. Guinness' effects might have been brought off had the material not been run through the script-washing machine before its transfer to film.

AT THE GALLERIES

A newly hung exhibit (the second to be shown at this new gallery) at Hans Skaalegaard's Square Rigger, opened with a little Christmas party of punch and Danish cookies Sunday afternoon a week ago.

Skaalegaard's portraits of ships in full sail are crisp and fresh, and he enjoys telling the gallery-goer tales of the sea and his own years before the mast. This gallery is not easy to find. It is tucked away in the inner court of the Los Cortes Building, off Dolores between 5th and 6th, without its own shingle as yet.

Marcia Rider to star in comedy at Circle Theatre

Marcia Rider will star in "Any Wednesday," a happy comedy which is the Community Theatre's contribution to the holiday season. It will open Dec. 30 and run for seven weeks at the Circle Theatre.

The title refers to the day of the week John Cleeves takes time off from his suburban family to pursue his mistress whom he has established in his company's tax-deductible executive suite.

Bill Scholefield will portray a millionaire for the second time in the role of Cleeves. He has played the title role of "The Happiest Millionaire" and last season was seen as Doc in "Mister Roberts" at the Studio.

Mrs. Rider who plays the mistress, is well known to local audiences as a dancer as well as an actress. Her last performance at the Circle was in "Mad Woman of Chaillot."

Margaret Phillips, who plays the wife in this sophisticated comedy, has just completed a stint as stage manager for "Hedda Gabler." Newcomer Richard Barry Schreibman, playing Cass Henderson, is an Army lieutenant stationed locally and comes from New York.

"Any Wednesday" will play every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night at 8:30.

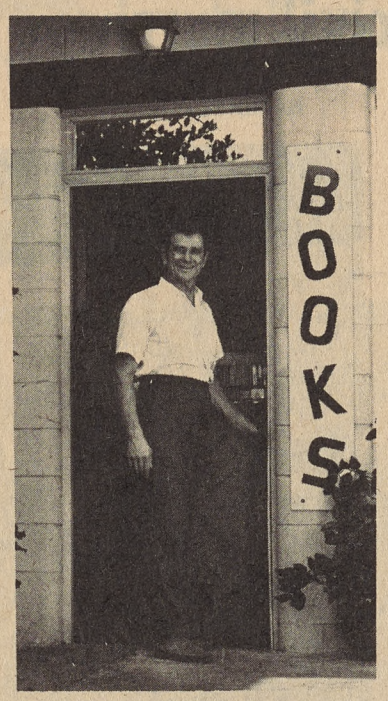
Sailing expert Leland R. Lewis returns to write another 'Sea Guide'

Why the rash of boats wrecked on the coast in the area over the past few months?

It shouldn't have happened, according to a man who knows. He is Leland R. Lewis, author of "Sea Guide, The Yachtsman's Handbook . . A Key to Cruising Southern California Waters," and an experienced sailor of many years on the West Coast and the Pacific.

He was featured at an autograph party at the Friar Tuck Book Shop in Carmel last weekend.

The occasion was the second printing of Lewis's "Sea Guide" and to welcome him back as a resident of the Carmel area. He and his family are now living on the ocean edge in the home in front of the little red school house between Carmel Meadows and the Highlands.



SAILING EXPERT Lee Lewis stands in the doorway of the Friar Tuck Book Shop where he was feted by an autograph party for his book, "Sea Guide, The Yachtman's Handbook... A Key to Cruising Southern California's Waters." He is working on another "Sea Guide" for Northern California.

LEFT LITTON

Lewis recently threw up his job as advertising manager for Litton Systems in Southern California, to move here and devote full time to writing additional "Sea Guides." He is at work on one for Northern California and plans others for Baja California and the Hawaiian Islands.

"Most of these accidents with boats going on the beach recently could have been avoided," Lewis said. "Emergencies occur and accidents happen beyond control, but most wrecks could have been prevented by following rules of sea-emergency and knowledge of seamanship."

"People should realize you can't just get in a boat like you do in a car, and take off without preparation and knowledge," the nautical expert declared. "Many sail without respect for the ocean and the elements, without an inkling of what to do when they suddenly find themselves in trouble."

He said that most coastal, holiday sailors don't chart their course to know where they are at all times, which professionals do and experienced sailors generally do. "If fog comes in, they don't know whether it's too deep to anchor, where currents are taking them or where the harbor is," he declared.

As one example, he cited the wreck a couple of weeks ago of a sail boat on the Marina beach, with loss of one life. The inexperienced owner was quoted as saying he didn't realize he was as close to the beach as he was until he went aground.

Lewis urged all would-be sailors to educate themselves on seamanship before taking on the hazards of the uncompromising sea.

His magnificent big book lists a variety of sources of seamanship information. Explaining that you can't cover everything, even in its 254 pages, the book directs the nautically inclined to a host of sources on the vast coastal territory covered.

Published by the Marine Publications' division of Geo. Rice & Sons' publishing house of Los Angeles, the volume is a practical guide for sailors and includes 38 detailed charts by Peter E. Ebelling, and large aerial photos of all harbors from Point Arguello, Calif., to Ensenada, Mex.

Lee Lewis's credentials for producing "Sea Guides" are excellent. He has sailed a good part of his 43 years on everything from his first home-built 14-foot snipe off his home in Santa Monica to huge tuna clippers.

In 1940, his brother and he launched their second home-made boat, a 20-ton sloop. They cruised the coast from San Quintin in Baja, Calif., to the Channel Islands.

NAVY INTELLIGENCE

When World War II came, he sailed first in the Merchant Marine to many battle fronts. Then, joining the Navy, he was an intelligence officer and navigator on a tuna fishing boat, reporting foreign vessels and weather to Washington. The tuna clipper explored nearly every bay and inlet from the U.S. to Chile, searching for bait necessary for tuna fishing.

Immediately after the war, Lewis purchased at a give-away price a 76-foot schooner owned by Painless Parker, the maverick dentist. "He was getting on," Lewis recalled, "and I suspect he offered me the schooner at that price because he felt that I somehow would be an extension of his own dreams to sail off carefree on the beautiful black ship."

After he had refurbished the vessel which had been tied up during the war in Alameda, he spent several years taking out charter parties from Southern California ports. Then came a year at Acapulco, and a couple more idyllic years in Hawaii waters.

"I sold the schooner 'Idalia' out there to someone who didn't have much experience," he reminisced. "They demasted her in a storm in mid-ocean and she wallowed around for about 10 days. They were lucky. Picked up by a freighter, they were just taken aboard the ship in time to watch the schooner sink.

"Well, that was a better way for her to go," he said sentimentally, "than to rot on the rocks somewhere."

'TAGI' SKIPPER

In 1953 Lewis was skipper of Stanford's Hopkins Marine Survey Station motor vessel based in Monterey. In the 40-foot motor vessel, "Tagi," he made twice weekly trips to Santa Cruz waters, taking sea samples and observations.

The necessity to provide a more substantial living for a family steered him on to land. An electrical engineer with ability to write, he at first worked for a recording company, before going with Litton Industries. He is still a consultant for Litton Industries CDCEC operation at Ft. Ord and with McGraw-Hill's California Test Bureau at Monterey Airport, and is doing some retail advertising advising in Carmel.

"What really decided me to chuck Southern California was taking a look at it from the airplane we took all our aerial views of harbors for 'Sea Guide'," he said. "We had to make about 30 flights to average five usable photos because of the dirty smog even right there on the coast."

His family is happy with the break with Southern California life to move to Carmel. His wife, Judy, is teaching new math in Project EDINN in Pacific Grove schools. Their two daughters, Marci, 12, and Nani, 13, are attending Carmel Middle School.

Although Lewis figures he can't afford a big boat at the moment, there's a sea-worthy-looking little skiff lying in front of their home on the beach. "We shove it off at the creek mouth in the protected area, and in about half an hour out there at the edge of the seaweed, we pull in 20 or so fish."

Who wouldn't give up the executive life for this?

U.S.S.R. exchange visitor surprised by elegance of civil marriage ceremony

By GINNIE DREW

Outlook Editor Ginnie Drew who recently returned from the Soviet Union, reports on a wedding in Leningrad.

Although June and early summer is also a popular time for weddings in the Soviet Union, the Marriage Palace in Leningrad does a booming business all year long, according to its director.

SURPRISE

Having heard of the civil ceremonies which are performed, we expected a straight "city hall" type of wedding. It was with astonishment that we entered the lobby of the Palace to view a beautiful curving staircase which would be the delight of any bride. The babble of young voices, the smell of fresh flowers and the distant pop of champagne corks were added to the first impression.

The director escorted us through in the order which the engaged couple would follow. First, we entered a room where a number of young people were applying for marriage licenses. This must be done at least one month ahead of the wedding date and the applicants must both be 18 years old or more.

After the application is filled out (cost is one ruble and 50 kopeks...a nominal fee) the couple is told what time is available on the day of their choice. If they wish, they may have the use of a room for a reception.

TRADITIONAL WHITE is worn by the bride in the Soviet Union. Music is played to accompany the ceremony performed under the dancing light from a crystal chandelier in the Marriage Palace.

ON THE BIG DAY

On the day of the wedding, girls wait in one room, nervously freshening their makeup and twisting their bouquets, while the young men wait in a nearby room, joking and pacing.

We tiptoed into one of the wedding halls and watched a ceremony being performed.

The bride, a petite young thing who looked more French than Russian, was dressed in white with a shoulder length veil and carried white gladioli. One of the chief officials of Leningrad presided and conducted the ceremony, telling them of the seriousness and joy of married life and giving the blessing of the state. Guests dabbed at their eyes and sighed "how beautiful" at the words the city official spoke to the young couple. A clerk conducted the formalities of papers which were signed by the couple and their attendants while "wedding-type" music was played.

BEST WISHES

After the ceremony I asked the interpreter if I might speak to them and wish them luck and happiness. We met as they came down that impressive staircase and they appeared thrilled and delighted to find out that we were Americans. In Russia, one of the most cherished gifts that a person can offer is a Kennedy half dollar, which is kept as a good luck charm. We gave one to the bride with the blessing of the American women and she almost wept.

As we left in our car, she and her new husband were just being driven away from the Palace of Marriages. They rolled down the window calling, "Thank you...Spasiba! Goodbye...dosvedanya!"

The divorce headquarters were in the same building which we suppose would be quite an efficient arrangement, but we didn't go there and spoil the glow.

Outlook On Carmel

CARMEL VALLEY OUTLOOK — December 21, 1966

OUTSTANDING ENGLISH STUDENT is Carol Kiler, Carmel High senior, who has been named one of 38 students in California in the 1966 National Council of Teachers of English competition. She is shown here with the two English teachers she has had at Carmel High, Mrs. Ethylene Ward and Frederic Rainer. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kiler of Carmel, Carol earned the honor by taking a test and writing an essay about herself. Reed College in Portland, Ore., is her No. 1 collegiate choice at the moment, after graduation.

Book shop changes ownership

A team of lady book experts, Janet Powell and her daughter, Ann Kessinger, are new owners and managers of Friar Tuck Book Shop, Carmel.

Mrs. Powell's late husband was an English professor at Stanford, before moving to the University of Arizona, Tucson, where he became head of the English department. He also edited the "Arizona Quarterly."

Mrs. Kessinger is a Stanford graduate and has lived chiefly in the Bay Area.

They have added considerably to the book-stock of the store.

Still emphasized are paper backs, plus large art books, others on architecture, nature, archaeology, sports, surfing, sailing, fishing, photography, and travel. An up-to-the-minute stock of recent best sellers, in hard covers, is also available.

Mrs. Heath conducts seminar

Mrs. Barbara Heath of Carmel, Monterey Peninsula College anthropology instructor, was at San Diego State College last week to conduct seminars in an anthropometric training project for graduate students.

While there, she was guest speaker for the winter meeting of the San Diego County Chapter of Phi Epsilon Kappa, national physical education honorary fraternity. Her speech was entitled "At Work and Play with the Manus" and dealt with her experiences with Dr. Margaret Mead on a field trip in February to Manus, Territory of Papua and New Guinea.

Mrs. Heath has also been retained by San Diego State's Division of Physical Education as consultant for a research study of the "exercise-induced changes in habitually sedentary middle-aged males."

Children's Home Society benefit

MRS. DOUGLAS BRANTLEY (right), president of the Winnie the Pooh chapter of the Children's Home Society, and Mrs. William Smith, examine a "Christmas tree" made by Mrs. Furneaux White of Carmel. Mrs. White's tree was on display at the Home Society Christmas Fantasy, planned by Mrs. Smith.

The Carmel Business Association firmly endorses Monday, December 26 as a part of the Christmas Holiday nationally proclaimed and urges all businesses to observe the day by remaining closed.

Lionettes give birthday party for Alice Munoz

The Carmel Valley Lionettes found time to include in their busy holiday schedule a birthday party for one of the patients at the Carmel Convalescent Hospital last week. Mrs. Alice Munoz who was born on Christmas Eve, 77 years ago, shared her cake decorated in pink and white with other patients. Mrs. Tony August had baked the confection. Mrs. Larry Feldman, chairman of the birthday project, presented Mrs. Munoz with a gift.

Under the oaks and among the cacti

By Mildred Hattan

Oaks and Cactus is indebted to Col. and Mrs. C.G. Fairchild of La Rancheria who were kind enough to share with us news of their sons, Don and Getty. Vietnam will not be a strange country to Don who recently volunteered and was accepted for Army helicopter training. Don was there in 1961 with his parents when his father was Secretary of the Joint Staff, Military Assistance Command. Col. Fairchild served under Gen. Paul D. Harkings, who was predecessor of Gen. Westmoreland. The alert after volunteering was a short one so Don sends a fond farewell with "O. and C." to all his many Valley friends.

Don's brother, Getty Scott, has already been to Vietnam twice—as a civilian and as a Marine. Upon completion of his 3 1/2 year tour in the Marines, Getty attended MPC for a semester and is now a resident of Dallas, Tex. He spent a year at S.M.U. prior to joining the Marines and plans to return to college next fall. Mrs. (Gene) Fairchild is the secretary of the CV Trail and Saddle Club and is a member of the MPVS. Col. Fairchild, who served 27 years before retirement, is associated with Enos Fouratt Real Estate in Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Nicholsen of Paso Cresta entertained with a birthday party for their daughter, Fawn, who celebrated her sixth birthday on Dec. 3. Red, white and black carousels set the party theme for Fawn and her guests who were classmates, Celeste Jones, Tracy Keaton; her six month old sister, Heidi, and playmates, Linda Tedrow and Tamie Stainbrook. Mrs. Nicholsen was assisted by Mrs. Jan Jones.

Settled in their new home in Washington, D.C., in time for Christmas was the goal set for Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. Jack Campbell who received orders last week for the East. Although Loretta, Jack and children, Sally, Susan, and Scott, had only made their home on El Caminito a short stop between Hawaii and Washington, they made many Valley friends who were sorry to see them leave. Best wishes and congratulations on this exciting promotion.

Mrs. Richard McKenzie invited guests to her Lupin Lane home recently to view a fashion show coordinated and commentated by Mrs. Mildred Ingersoll of Salinas. The hostess served refreshments to her guests as they enjoyed the style show.

Attending were Mmes. Harvey Deal, John Woods, Luther Washington, Don McKenzie, Robert Davis, Dave Mathews, Vera Stokes, Sal Ocampo, Don Draper, Adolf Friedenthal, T.D. Ayres, William Hall, Ruth Schwarzman, George Palmer and Mrs. L. Tombleson.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Draper and children welcomed Don's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Draper, who arrived at their Valley home on Sage Rd. last weekend for an indefinite stay.

Celebrating Christmas in their new home in La Mesa Village will be Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. G.A. Rettig and family. Paula and children had made temporary headquarters at the Valley Lodge until notified that Naval housing was available.

Marie and Milt Frumkin once again have the 50 foot pine tree on the mountain above Schulte Rd. illuminated and sending a cheery holiday message via 200 colored bulbs to friends, neigh-

First grade Christmas party at Tularcitos has International flavor

"Kuweanotwok Kusamassic" (the Eskimo version of Merry Christmas) and "Feliz Navidad" were greetings chalked on the blackboard to the guests attending the Pinata Party last week in Mrs. Elaine Sandberg's first grade room at Tularcitos School. The children, who have been studying the North American Continent, had made two giant pinatas assisted by Mrs. Zane Speiser, as a tribute to their friends south of the border.

The girls chose an orange donkey and the boys a blue bear named "Blue-Pooh," which were filled with goodies as well as small gifts for the students' gift exchange. Fathers and mothers of the children were invited to attend and share the punch and cookies served by the room mothers, Mrs. Lloyd Swanson and Mrs. Mark Hattan.

The girls had difficulty breaking their fabulous burro so a blind-folded Mrs. John Rushmer, assisted by Mrs. Tom Bottaro, wielded the ribbon-trimmed stick which send goodies (and children) flying about the room!

A very special guest was a classmate, Jess Taylor, who was injured seriously in a fall at the beginning of school and has been hospitalized since. Jess was able to attend in a wheel chair accompanied by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. John Taylor.

Protect hillside homesites

CV conservationist tells how to prevent erosion

Owners of homesites on sloping land which weathered the recent storm, do not need to be reminded to take precaution against erosion that is likely to occur again this year when the more rains come, according to Bob Wilson, president of the Carmel Valley Soil Conservation District.

He advises owners to protect their homesites from further erosion with the following advice:

"Newly graded land, or land not well protected by vegetation or mechanical means, situated on slopes over one per cent, is subject to erosion.

"Hillsides planted to young shrubs with nothing but bare soil in between may become ribbed and fluted like a piano organ during a high intensity storm. It is discouraging to see a gully form at the edge of a homesite and gradually 'eat' its way back under a house foundation. Repairing such damage is usually more costly than preventing it.

PREVENTATIVE METHOD

"There are several tried methods that can protect from or reduce erosion damage. The least costly is vegetative control.

"Grass gives the quickest and best protection, but is not always suitable on steeply sloping hillsides because of the difficulty of maintenance.

"Trailing vines and shrubs are next in order of protection but they take a relatively long time to cover the land and are more costly. Mulching with straw, peat, wood shavings, manure, offers good protection against erosion.

"In addition mechanical controls may be needed, such as contour ditches, pipe drops or chutes, retaining walls, plastic covers or wire fencing.

"Lawns are adaptable to land that is flat or gently sloping. The type of seed to use depends on local climate and the individual preference. Dichondra lawns, for example, take longer than grass lawns to establish and to provide protection against erosion.

"For land with slopes of 10 per cent or more, trailing plants such as ice plant, ivy, trailing honeysuckle, trailing strawberry and others are available. These may be interplanted with trees such as Aleppo or Monterey pine."

CONSULT NURSERY

According to Director Hans Ewoldsen, Big Sur, the local nurserymen can advise owners on the type of vegetation to use.

"Because of the length of time required to obtain protection from runoff when vines and shrubs are first planted, or small, some of the other measures may be needed, alone or in combination," he continued. "One of these is mulching.

"Usually the cost of the mulching material governs its selection. Mulch is spread between the small shrubs and vines so that all the bare spaces are covered about 2 feet 3 inches deep.

"On extremely steep slopes, a mulching material may not be able to remain and washes, rolls or slides downhill. In such an instance, the mulch must be anchored down.

"This can be done by the use of sacking or fence wire, pinned down with stakes. If the slope is not severe, annual rye-grass scattered over the area raked slightly and covered by a layer of manure or peat and irrigated gently to start germination, gives good protection.

"The disadvantages of using rye is that it dies out, is generally unsightly and therefore must be cut by hand which entails considerable work, but it is an excellent soil conserver.

These and other details were given by Carmel Valley Soil Conservation District Directors as a "superficial review of measures that are effective in controlling erosion." They hope it will serve as a guide in preventing costly damages. Also, the Carmel Valley Soil Conservation District and local Soil Conservation Service technicians stand ready to consult with homeowners on these problems.

Feb. deadline for scholarships

Student deadline for filing applications for February scholarship awards at MPC is the first week in January, it was announced this week by Mrs. Marjorie Marshall, college director of student services.

1 t. baking powder
1 cup sugar
3 t. cinnamon
Sift together and add:
1/2 cup soft butter and 1/2 cup other shortening
1 egg yolk
1 t. shredded orange rind

Mix well and stir in a 6 oz. package chocolate morsels and 1/2 cup chopped walnuts.

Shape into 1 inch balls and dip in slightly beaten egg white and roll in 3/4 cup sugar with 1 t. cinnamon. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a preheated 350 degree oven.

(We tried this recipe without the chocolate chips, in the interest of non-chocolate eating friends, and the result was very good.)

ITALIAN ALMOND COOKIES

Mrs. Ollason got this unusual recipe from a Swiss friend. It makes lots of crisp cookies which keep well.

6 egg whites
4 cups sugar
3 cups flour
1 cup thinly sliced almonds
2 heaping t. baking powder
1 t. almond flavoring

Sift dry ingredients with a pinch of salt. Make little holes in the mixture and drop in spoonfulls of egg white and add almonds and flavoring. Stir until well mixed. Form into rolls about 2 1/2 inches in diameter and store over night. Slice as thin as possible, taking one roll from the refrigerator at a time. Bake on well-greased cookie sheet, at 375 for 10 or 15 minutes.

COOKIE DELICIOUS

1/2 lb. butter or margarine
4 heaping T. brown sugar
Cream together well and add:
2 t. vanilla
2 t. water
2 cups sifted flour
2 cups chopped walnuts

Roll into small balls and bake in preheated 300 degree oven for about 20 minutes. While still hot, roll in powdered sugar.

For variety (and a more sophisticated cookie, we think) use slivered almonds and almond extract instead of walnuts and vanilla.)

MERRY CHRISTMAS

'Tis the season for joy, thoughtfulness and thank yous. So we're taking time to say just that, and wish you a very Happy Holiday.

bors, and travelers on the Carmel Valley Rd. Accompanying a check to help defray electrical expenses was a large box of candy made by one of the appreciative residents of Carmel Valley Manor.

A touching incident occured early this season involving the tree that has a special meaning for young and old alike. It meant so much to one couple at the Manor that each year they have made their own personal donation to keep the lights shining throughout the Holidays. The gentleman died this year, but his death came after the lights of the tree which had given him so much pleasure, had been turned on for the coming Holy season.

The three elegant Christmas trees decorating the tables at the Christmas party and installation dinner of the American Institute of Architects last week at Rippling River Resort are now holiday conversation pieces in the homes of three lucky winners whose names were drawn at the evening's end.

Trimmed with clusters of red grapes and garlands (attached to the boughs with large gold bows), the trees were nestled among pine boughs lining the center of the table, with candles and cones sprayed gold.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ricker of Laurel Dr. were chairmen of the holiday event, attended by 30 members and guests. Marcel Sedletsky was installed as new president of the A.I.A. replacing retiring president, Ted Minnis. Mrs. Walter Burde, retiring president of the Women's Architectural League, an auxiliary, introduced their new president, who is Mrs. Robert McIntyre.

Since Ashley Swanson is an enthusiastic first year ballet student, a ballerina theme was used in the party decor last week when she celebrated her fifth birthday. While Becky Viljoen, Pamela Gayman, and Hilary Gray joined Ashley in every little girl's favorite pastime, "Make-believe and Dress-up," Mrs. Swanson served tea to the mothers who attended, Mrs. Kirk Gayman and Mrs. Marian Gray.

Later, the party guests were joined for birthday cake and refreshments by Ashley's brother Kent, Tricia Mervine and Ronnie Gayman. Wednesday's guest of honor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Swanson of E. Carmel Valley Rd.

The Valley Bridge Club held their Monthly Masterpoint Tournament last week at the Community Center. Winners in the North-South were: 1st place, Mrs. Ralph Bisnett and Mrs. Daniel Evans; 2nd place, Mrs. Irene Baldwin and Mrs. Mary Angier; 3rd place, Mrs. R.B. Stoney and Mrs. Robert Angell.

Awards in the East-West went to Mr. and Mrs. E.W. Gravelle in 1st place; Mrs. Dale Vandervort and Mrs. John Hudelson in 2nd place; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Alm in 3rd.

Confirmation rites held at St. Dunstan's

A number of Valley young people were confirmed in ceremonies at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church recently. Those who completed their instruction were Margie and Tom Boyd, Wendy Eagling, Holly Leslie, Kathy Neill, Kevan Strathmeyer, Toni Lee and Greg Willis, George Gray III, Tedde Hansen, Sara and Dorothy Loomis and Sarah McKenzie.

Three adults were also received in the ceremony conducted by the Rt. Rev. Richard Millard, Suffragen Bishop of California. They were Mr. and Mrs. T. O'Neal of Paso Robles and Mrs. George Gray from Carmel Valley.

From all of us to all of you, we send our greetings and best wishes for a merry, old-fashioned holiday season.

March 7 set for tax election

Carmel school board asks for 37¢ override

Dr. Harris Taylor, superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District presented his board with a wealth of information and detailed reports in support of his request for a 37 cent override tax election.

In calling for the tax increase deemed necessary to maintain the instructional and physical aspects of the district, Taylor said, "Upon arriving in Carmel it was necessary to evaluate the program and it became immediately clear that the defeat of the override (the 70 cent tax defeated last March) had placed the program in some jeopardy."

"The overall effect of the defeat is accumulative. For the first year we draw on materials in stock, but as it progresses we cannot re-order, resupply or repair," he added.

The detailed reports of the maintenance, instructional and transportation needs of the district were prepared by Dr. Taylor and his staff with Walter Hinton, business manager. Taylor pleaded with citizens of the district to go to the trouble of going to the schools and becoming informed.

Harold Arnot, representing the Taxpayer's Association, opposed to the tax, complimented the superintendent's office on the report, but queried, "Where will the money come from?"

"The use of a property tax to obtain money for education is obsolete and antiquated," he continued. "We need a new method for people to pay."

Pointing out the standardization of assessments under new legislation, Arnot added that property owners cannot afford further taxation and suggested fighting the problem at the state level "together."

Taylor agreed that there should be changes in the means of obtaining money. However he said, "I am responsible for the education of 3,100 children next year. A reform of tax does not take place in two weeks, two months or two years.

"This is not an elaborate program," he continued. "We have been specific. We are all taxpayers... it isn't as though teachers and educators didn't pay taxes."

In explaining the tax, Taylor stressed that even with the additional 37 cents, bringing the rate to 2.52 per $100 assessment, the tax will still be the lowest in the area.

Taylor further explained the need of the tax increase because the district is one with a high assessed valuation. This means nothing, he said, unless you make use of it. Because of the high assessment, we do not qualify for extra state aid, beyond the basic foundation aid of $165 per student which has been increased only $5 since 1950.

Prior to submitting the resolution ordering for tax election, the board discussed other possible means of acquiring money. Repeatedly the Carmel Trust, an organization suggested by members of the Taxpayer's Association, was mentioned as a possible source. Shelburn Robison reported that a test agreement was being examined by the franchise tax board to establish the legality of tax exemption for donors, and while they had not collected any money as yet, he felt donations would be forthcoming when this was cleared.

After hearing the audience discussion, the board unanimously agreed on the need for the tax increase, which on a $20,000 piece of property would be $18.25 per year or a rate of 5¢ per day.

Taylor stressed the need for the election prior to the regular board election because of time needed to formulate next year's program.

Merry Christmas

It's Christmastime. The land is cloaked in white serenity . . . hearths are aglow with golden embers of warmth and homeliness . . . peace and happiness fill the air. Parents can aid in homework

Objectives of homework reviewed by CHS principal Warren Edwards

Freshmen at Carmel High School can "probably" exist on about an hour a night homework and, under the school's sliding scale, "seniors come closer to the three-hour mark," according to Principal Warren Edwards.

"There is always too much homework for some and not enough for others," Edwards explained.

"Ideally, homework is the extension of the activities begun in school by the student under the guidance of his teacher, and continued at home. It is assigned to stimulate initiative, responsibility, and self-direction. It is to provide practice and application of principles learned or discovered, and to enrich school experiences.

"A high school aged student should not have more than three hours a night.

"I believe the greatest difficulty is to get students—sorry, wrong word, because students have the problem licked—to appreciate the difference between homework and studying. Homework is that specific assignment which the teacher wants to see tomorrow in class. This means the algebra problems, the Spanish vocabulary to memorize, or the English sentences to finish.

"Whereas, studying is that extra exploration into related fields: the review of last week's work that was not too clearly understood when we went over it in class; the re-working of class notes or reading notes. Studying is that self-directed work to nail down concepts, ideas, and conclusions. The person who has captured the techniques of studying is the person who is more than likely to be receiving the good grades—and incidentally, the education.

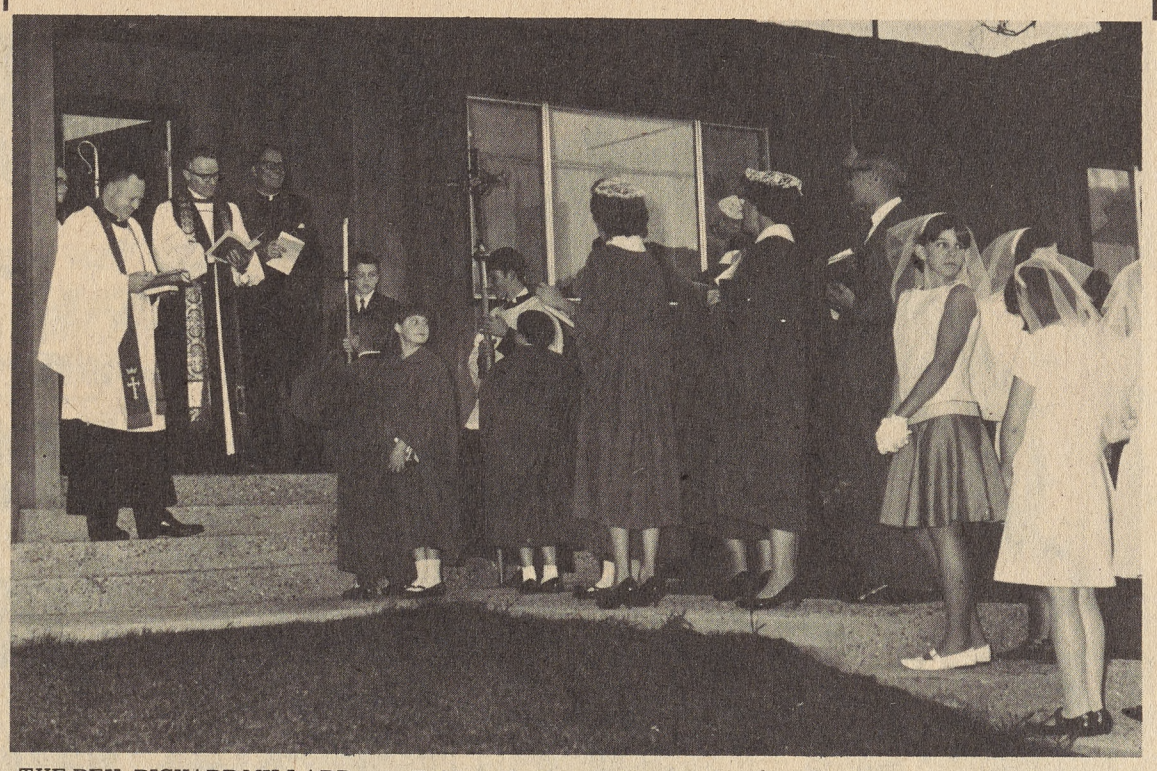
"Parents can help by providing a suitable place for study. A desk in the student's room is best, but not always possible. A quiet dining room table is good. In any case, somewhere where a drawer can be devoted to the materials needed.

PARENTAL HELP

"Parents can help the pupil develop systematic home-study habits. You cannot study better with the radio. It simply is not true. The Madison Avenue boys have studied too much psychology not to grab our attention. Most young people simply haven't developed such powers of concentration as to blot out the radio—or TV. Have you?

"And lastly, I think parents can help by more thoroughly understanding what the teacher is trying to do. If you can't get it from the assignments, then give us a call. We'll be happy to set up an appointment with the teacher.

New rectory at St. Dunstan's blessed by Rt. Rev. Millard



THE REV. RICHARD MILLARD, suffragen bishop of California, presided over the blessing of the new rectory at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church last Sunday. Rev. Jim Brock and visiting minister, Rev. Richard Beaumont (right) of Paso Robles, joined him on the steps with the choir and members of the confirmation class.

The Rhyming Philosopher

When each Christmas comes, which I can't prevent,
There's a fatal urge to get mired in debt,
Which, backed by an obdurate precedent
And a despot factor known as etiquette,
While I stifle a sigh and an epithet,
I tear through the shops to select the gift
For each name on the list, and mustn't forget
What I gave last year so they won't get miffed.

Though my feet complain like a wayward child
I must keep right on 'til the stores all close
And repeat next day, though it drives me wild
I'm beset with a doubt as dilemma grows
Whether Jane already has too many hose,
Or does Bill still smoke those long black cigars;
And what will please Marybelle God only knows—
Nothing much less than the sun, moon and stars!

So when Christmas is here and gifts are dispersed,
Forget about debts and prepare for the worst:
To hear, after all that you suffered and bleeded,
The lies as they tell you, "It's just what I needed!"

Kiwanis Club holds luncheon meeting

Three letters of appreciation to Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club were read by Pres. Rex White at last week's luncheon meeting.

They were from the American Field Service for a $50 gift for Carmel High School's exchange student program, from Pong Q. Ching, club founder and past district president for being honored by the club, and from Boy Scout headquarters for support; the club voted to sponsor the troop's Scoutmaster and Mrs. Bob Ray to the annual Peninsula Scout District Recognition dinner Jan. 16.

A talk, illustrated with slides on a trip to Ireland last summer, was given by club member Bill Norton.

At the recent installation dinner a "Citation for Service" was presented Lou Gardner for outstanding service to the local club and perfect attendance pins were presented to new Pres. Joe Ricupero for eight years, to retiring Pres. Rex White for seven years and to Dr. Dean Campbell and Don Quinto each for two years' perfect attendance.

Jim Bundgard to tour Baja Calif. during Holidays

James E. Bundgard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman F. Bundgard of Live Oak Lane, a senior at California State Polytechnic College, is one of 17 students who are making an eight day tour of Baja California.

Sponsored by Cal Poly's student College Union Outings Committee, the tour will cover an estimated 1400 miles and will utilize jeeps, provided by the Poly Goats 4WD Club (4-wheel drive), a student jeep organization, for transportation.

Before returning to campus Dec. 23, the tour is expected to provide its student members with a widely varied look at Mexico, its people, and its culture.

After traveling along the west coast of Baja California on the way south, the Cal Poly group expects to cross the Sierra Colombia Mountains and return via the east coast of the Mexican peninsula.

Cities the students expect to visit along the way include Ensenada, Colonia Guerrero, El Rosario, Mission San Fernando, Rancho Chapala, El Marmol, San Felipe, Bahia de Los Angeles, and San Augustin.

The College Union Outings Committee is the same organization that sponsored a 10-week, 15,000-mile tour of the United States last summer. It is also making plans for a similar tour of Alaska tentatively scheduled for this summer.

Oratorio to be broadcast on KMBY-FM

"PEACE ON EARTH, good will toward men," is an ever-present feeling at Carmel Mission, accented by the Christmas Oratorio presented by the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society. This year's music will be broadcast over KMBY-FM on Friday from 8 to 11 p.m. for those who missed the early performance in Carmel.

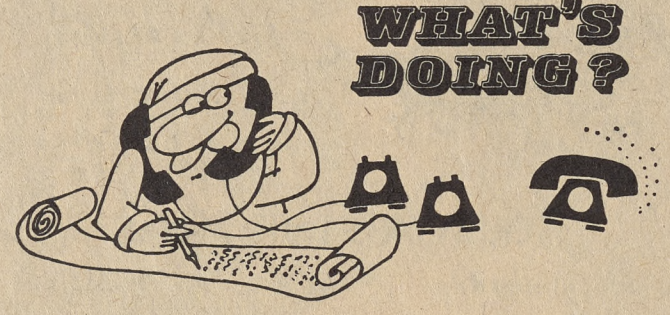
Listen to Carmel Valley news every Thursday morning at 10:30 over radio station KIDD. News director Jack Parr broadcasts in cooperation with the Carmel Valley Outlook.



Christmas came a little early to Monterey County when one of its biggest taxpayers, Pacific Telephone, presented a check for $704,709.98.

The payment, half of the annual company property tax bill, was presented Monday to Tax Collector Orville N. Molmen, according to D.R. Mulkey, local manager.

A second check for an equal amount will be paid to the county next April.

The payment was $35,232.72 higher than a year ago, a 2.6 per cent increase.

Monterey County collected $617,143.49 for itself and for schools and special district levies.

In addition, it accepted the city taxes for Carmel ($3,856.38), Del Rey Oaks ($261.33), Gonzales ($901.10), Greenfield ($684.20), King City ($2,070.80), Monterey ($33,239.13), Pacific Grove ($2,820.24), Salinas ($46,380.74), Sand City ($19), Seaside ($6,329.17), and Soledad ($1,004.40). All were first installment payments.

Pacific Telephone's total property tax bill in California for fiscal 1966-67 will be about $126,755,000, up 5.5 per cent over last year.

The company's 1960-61 property tax payments amounted to $81,222,000. Payments this fiscal year are $45,544,000 higher for a 56.1 per cent increase over five years ago.

As a result, the company continues to hold the record, as it has for the past eight years, as California's largest single property taxpayer.

The holiday season has once again come to the Monterey Peninsula bringing the areas traditional joys and festivities.

Pacific Grove's Singing Christmas Tree and Carmel's Christmas Bach Oratorio provide residents with the sounds of the season.

Santa Claus has thrilled youngsters by leading Monterey and Pacific Grove parades and hosting the annual Santa Claus Special Train ride and Seaside Fire Department's Children's Christmas Party.

All of us at Pacific Telephone on the Monterey Peninsula want to take this opportunity to wish you and your family the happiest of holidays and a most prosperous new year. We're very proud of the role we've been able to play in the Peninsula's development and look forward to serving and sharing in its future in the new year to come.

May I extend our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Seasons Greetings from the men and women of

Joan will tour Japan to support Institute

by a conscientious objector from Fort Gordon, Ga., who went AWOL because he wanted to have an opportunity to attend the school. He hitch-hiked across the country, spent four days at the school and then turned himself in at Fort Ord. He is now back in Georgia, facing a court martial with a possible sentence of three to five years at hard labor.

She said that she was not in any way acting like an underground railroad... not harboring soldiers or sailors but that she would not turn them away if they came and wanted help ... she also would not turn them in. If authorities were looking for them, she would certainly admit that the person was there.

INSTITUTE IS BROKE

In discussing her plans for the future, Joan said she expects to leave early in January for a tour of Japan where she will give eight or nine concerts. Proceeds from this tour will go to help finance the school in Carmel Valley.

She added, "What we'd like to do is expand the school."

We asked if she meant to enlarge the Valley facilities, and she said, "Oh, no! I mean another location, perhaps in the East, perhaps in Europe.

"The school is broke, because I am broke," Joan added. Operating costs run about $1,000 a month she added, and since she had not given professional concerts this year, her income is way below normal.

She added that the past year of not singing professionally has been of great value. "I stopped singing to try and grow up. The entertainment field is a dopey place to try and grow up."

While in Japan she plans to spend time at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, probably giving a concert there and returning a percentage of the proceeds to the latter city.

INCOME TAX

Speaking of percentages, we asked her to comment on the report that she was withholding 75% of her income tax this year.

She said, "I haven't determined the 75% figure... the government has decided to increase the amount they spend on war. They call it defense... I call it offense."
